LOVE TRIUMPHANT DEBUTANTE'S PARTY

Sports Costumes to Greet Miss Norris.

One of the novel entertainments of the winter was given last night at the Biltmore by Mrs. Justus Ruperti. It was a dinner and skating party for Miss Dorothy Norris, a debutante of Philadelphia, who has been here before in the course of the winter for some of the dinners and dances. The dinner, for which all of the young people had been asked to wear sports clothes, was served at small tables in the music room, and during its progress there was music. Afterward Mrs. Ruperti and her guests went to the Ice Gardens for skating, where they were joined by other friends who came to skate or to watch the skaters.

Austin Strong, author of "The Toy Maker of Nuremburg" and later of "The Dragon's Claw" wrote this play of English life, which passed in a small town on a June morning in the year 1847.

One need only read the outline of Mr. Strong's fiction to discover that it contains none of the thrills of the modgirl who would not take him for a husband. She is the heroine of the book which he has written in the silence of the old shop to which come few customers to interrupt the quiet of his day dreams.
